Concepts for Muuto

Brief: Entries for the Muuto Talent Award.

To consider was Muuto's aims to to expand the Scandinavian design traditions with new and original perspectives.

Hatching - ceiling lamp

Inspired by a hatching egg, the Hatching lamp gently reveals the light inside.

The split wooden shell can be opened or closed by a pull on the chain at its bottom, to adjust the light outlet, hence adapting the mood of the room. When completely closed the electric current is cut.

The primary materials used are light oak and semi-opaque plastic that secludes the light bulb, but the lamp could also be imagined as having a plastic outer shell, in order to suit different tastes and settings. Works as well in the kitchen as in the bed room, as well as any other room.

Symbiosis - ceiling/floor lamp

In this lamp, two of the most basic geometric shapes come into symbiosis with each other.

The simple, yet interesting shape, the sphere and the cube benefits from one another, highlighting each others features and differences, while rightfully claiming its space in the room.

The Symbiosis lamp could also be made as a floor version on a stand, as well as made out of other types of wood, to meet a wider range of situations

Sharing footstool/table

The Sharing table/footstool is a piece of furniture that can both change the way a room is used, as well as change the mood of the room, by a simple flip of the top - the perfect compact living furniture piece!

Made out of light oak, cherry and pink leather cushioning, this piece both harmonizes with its surroundings through its simplicity, as well as stands out with its accent color and robustness, glancing at the past but from a modern point of view.
